SEEDING DOWN LANDS TO GRASS. it is well to take lessons from nature, and if we can improve thereon, do so, and thus assist nature in the development of its kind, Culture of all kinds are a artificial, and designed to assist nature in perfecting itself. It is for this we plow, sow, under drain, do. To assist nature to the greatest extent, we must prepare the soil properly previous to depositing the seed there in; if there is a supershundance of surface with the seed there in a supershundance of surface with the seed there in a supershundance of surface with the seed there in a supershundance of surface with the seed there in a supershundance of surface with the seed there in a supershundance of surface with the seed there in a supershundance of surface with the seed the seed there is a supershundance of surface with the seed the se superabundance of surface water, we must drain to carry it off; and for best effects we must under drain. for surface drains are apt to get filled and clog the water; coarse grassto get filled and clog the water; coarse grasses and weeds grow up in them, interfering with profitable culture, to say nothing of the waste of land, &c. A heavy, hard or close subsoil should be loosened by subsoil plowing; the top-soil made deeper by adding to depth of each successive plowing, thoroughly fined, and have manure well incorporated with it, to furnish the elements of nutrition for the growing plants. These are all needful to bring the land into tilth, that, the roots of grass may spread out and penetrate to a depth where they will obtain nourishment, and flourish in spite of drouth.

Another point in seeding to grass is.

Another point in seeding to grass is, whether several or a single sort of grass seed should be used, some farmers advocating a single sort, while others advocate several. single sort, while others advocate several. For pesture there can be no question but that several sorts are preferable to only one. Where several are used, the feed generally holds out more equally during the season. One sort produces an early growth of seed, but dries up in midsummer; another starts later, to take its place, and continues longer; another grows best in autumn; and thus, by having a variety, we have a spression. another grows best in autumn; and thus, by having a variety, we have a succession, which furnishes fresh feed the entire season. So of the different soils—one kind of grass flourishes best on a light soil, other kinds flourish best on heavy soil. One kind of grass is tap rooted, and sends its roots down to draw its food from below, and grow best near the surface. The variety of sorts furnish food to satisfy better the craving appetite of stock than the single one, and as a consequence they thrive best on such diet.

From experience and observation, I am satisfied that it is not at all essential, or even desirable, that grass seed should be sown with some kind of grain crop, where grass and hay are the first object. Grass seed sown on well prepared ground in September will make an excellent stand and growth for the next season's cutting; also, when sown in early spring, a good crop may be realized at the usual season of harvesting. Fall sowing on soil that do not heave by the frost is preferable to spring, as the ground is generally clean of weeds, and the grass starting into growth takes possession of the soil, while the seeds of weed, if any start to vegetate, are choked and die. Ou clay or heavy soils that are stiff, which cannot be well worked thus carly, all these advantages are not as readily enjoyed, and a spring seeding is best generally on such soils. well worked thus early, all these advantages are not as readily enjoyed, and a spring seeding is best generally on such soils. Where it is impracticable to put the seed in in March or early in April, it is advisable to seed down with some kind of grain, sown thin, so as not to choke out the grass, or by rank growth of straw be liable to fall down and smother it. A variety of from one to five sorts should be sown, and by no means at hin seeding. The variety of sorts should be unde up of kinds that come to maturity as near a like as possible, and know to succeed in the vicinity whre designed to be grown, and in similar soil.—W. H. White, Cultivatar.

Blackberries.—The sooner they, are planted the better. Kittatinny and Wilson's Early are among the newer kinds, and the New Rochelle is now so well known as to need Rechelle is now so well known as to need no description.

Seeds.—By all means order at once, and if roots of any kind, or cabbage or there p'ants, ment in another column of this paper.

roots of any kind, or cabbage or there p'ants, have been wintered over for seed-raising, put them out, the last of this month, in a dry, rich spot, and do not plant allied varieties near each other. Foresttention to seed raising would lessen the complaints of bad seed. It would be a good thing if the members of local clubs would each agree to raise one or two sorts of seeds. By doing thus greater purity and prefection could be agreed.

DECORATE THE HOMESTEAD. The toild breath of spring and the music of the early birds, remind us that the season approaches for planting, not only vegetables and grains necessary for man's subsistence, but shrubs, trees and flowers to feed the eye and nourish the taste.

There is no homestead on which a little judicious labor now will not result in more or less pleasure hereafter. Note on which there is not some nook or corner that can be here is not come nook or corner that can be beautified by a vine, a shrob or a plat of flowers. Nature will do her part if we per-form ours, and many a barren and unsightly yard or common may thus become a thing of beauty, adding to the pure joys of home. Next to wholesome food says a rural journal home pleasures are necessary to enliven our, spirits, promote our good health, and give a rest to rural life. What can give greater agtisfaction to a family of refined taste than to have the grounds around the homestead decorated with the beauties of nature so bountifully furnished us? Against ambition in its own sphere, be it far from me to utter a word, but ambition in the extreme has a tendency to cary mankind in a headlong career down to ruin. Filled with its incentive fire we rush madly Filled with its incentive fire we rush madly on heedless of the way. For proof of this, we need only refer to affairs of State at home, but of this it is not our direct purpose to speak. It is that ambition which inspires the youthful heart to seek for honor by sitting in high places, which fills them with a desire to be called "g eat," it being of no moment however, when he was to be called the second of of no moment however by what means this effect is obtained. Ambition is neccessary to great attainments in life but it should po Reason and ambition should go hand and hand but the former should invariable rule. If this were always true, what a change our personal offairs would assume. This is the key that unlocks the secret of mans success in life. You will observe a man who is a mediocere, engaged in some humble but honorable bussiness the offairs of which he can govern and direct with a good degree of skill and success, but he listens to the song of this syren which bids time rise higher. With high hopes he attempts to rise and with this attempt comes his ruin, simply because he has not the capacity to grasp this new enterprise. It is every whear acknowledged and ex-emplified that one mind may differ from an-other in brightness as the dazzling rays of the noon-day sun exceed the moon's pale light, and in fertility as the rich valloys of the western world differ from the former waste of Africa. And there are occupations which are honorable, suited to every grade of intellect and every order of mankind, and in patiently persueing this occapation we derive the source of our greatest pleas-ure. But how many do we see who go beyond this their sphere and failing say it is my "luck" when your abused "luck" has nothing to do in the matter or if she has is doing her duty well. Instances of this brind are on daily record for the young of America in their thirst for honor and position, seek a profession to give them honor in stead of being an honor to their profession. Youthful readers, let the guide to your future avocations be the lamp of reason and experience. Be not duluded with the belief that your young aspiration is an inspiration, but over remember it is far better to be an honor to an humble drofession than a dis-

The White Pine Compound.

"It was early in the spring of '22 that this compound was originated. A member of my family was afflicted with an irritation of the threat attended with a disspreadle cough. I had for some months gressions thought that a preparation having for its bagis the inside bark of white pine might be so compounded as to be very us-ful in diseases of the threat and lungs. To test the value of it in the case alluded to, I compounded a small quantity of the medicine that I had been planning, and gave it in test poonful does. The result was exceedingly gratifying. Within two days the irritation of ine threat was removed, the doubt in the first late of the threat was removed, the cough subvided, and a speedy cure was affected. Soon after this I sent to a lady in Londendury, N. H., who had been suffering for some weeks from a bed cough, occasionate by a sudden cold, and had sained mutum stray begans histord. She soon frum relief and sect for more. The tolk about ten ourses of it, and yet wall. J. R. Clarke, Eng., editor of the Mance acter.
